

Doug McCarron Collects on Southern California Pension!

While retired carpenters, after years of hard labor, manage to survive on their carpenter pensions. Many retired members need to supplement their pension with part or full-time employment.

The Carpenters Pension Plan prohibits retired members from working in industries related to construction. In other words, while you are receiving your pension, you can work in a grocery store, or some other form of retail, but you cannot be a maintenance man or even work in another construction trade.

This causes hardship to many of our brother members who find it difficult to survive on their pensions. A carpenter pension and social security in many cases does not make it.
